

Kathryn Hogan, MD; Assistant Dean of Clinical Skills Education at Albany Medical College (AMC). Contact: hogank@amc.edu

Katie is a Professor of Emergency Medicine and the Assistant Dean for Clinical Skills Education at AMC, where she leads the longitudinal clinical skills education for pre-clinical medical students. Her educational interests include clinical reasoning, simulation-based learning, curriculum innovation, and experiential medical education. She has developed and led a variety of novel educational programs spanning undergraduate and graduate medical education, with a particular focus on hands-on learning. Her work has been recognized with multiple institutional teaching awards, including the Sosa Academy of Medical Sciences Awards for teaching excellence and curricular innovation.

Katie has been an active member of DOCS since 2020 and is currently the 2024-2026 Northeast Regional Representative for DOCS.

